31 January 2019

- The application makes it possible to receive notifications in real time related to information selected by the user
- Users will be able to configure their access menu in order to receive the information they are most interested in.

The Spanish National Securities Market Commission (CNMV) has developed an application (app) to provide the interested public with access to the information that it offers through smartphones and other mobile devices. Those who download it will be able to configure a personal menu so that they can receive the content that most interests them and notifications of the developments in the sections that they select, among other features.

Users will thus have access to a new way of receiving financial information, price-sensitive information and details of CNMV's activities, as well as real-time access to all the content published on its website (public statements, speeches, information on social networks and other official registers, etc.).

CNMV has added this new digital tool for mobile devices, the use of which increases by more than 10% each year and is now the main means of access to the Internet.

The app's main functionalities are:

- Content customisation. Through the favourites section the user will be able to select and consult regularly the content that they want. The app makes it possible to adapt the information to the needs and priorities of each user.
- Push notifications. Through a system of alerts the user will be able to immediately know about the existence of new content in any given section or related to any particular issuer.

- Intuitive navigation. The design and presentation allow the user to carry out intuitive navigation, enabling them to gain access to the information.

CNMV's website is currently the institution's main communication channel and it receives an average of two million visits per day and between 55 and 65 million visits per month.

The new app has been developed for iOS and Android and, therefore, it is available in the App Store and Google Play stores. It can be downloaded from:
