

March 2013 traffic

Vueling increases passenger traffic by 3.6% in March

The company reaches a load factor of 80.2%

Barcelona, 11th April 2013. – Vueling Airlines has increased passenger traffic by 3.6% year on year. The company has carried 1,079,415 passengers and has reached a load factor of 80.2%, 1.7 points higher than the same period last year.

The traffic figures have been negatively impacted by the strike of Iberia handling and maintenance services. This situation has forced Vueling to cancel 318 flights, which represent 4% of the total scheduled flights.

The main traffic figures are the following:

	March
	2013	2012	% Change
Flights	7,713	7,551	2.1%
ASKs (millions)	1,299	1,148	13.2%
RPKs (millions)	1,042	901	15.6%
Load factor (RPKs/ASKs)	80.2%	78.5%	1.7pp
Passengers ('000)	1,079	1,041	3.6%

ASK (available seat-kilometre): number of seats flown multiplied by the number of kilometres flown

RPK (revenue passenger kilometre): number of passengers carried multiplied by the number of kilometres flown

New international routes

Vueling continues expanding its route network. Vueling will offer 103 destinations from Barcelona airport during this summer season. Vueling just announced that it will start operating three additional new routes this summer season: from Barcelona to Minsk, the capital of Belarus and from Barcelona to Cagliari and Olbia, in the island of Sardinia.