The Spanish National Securities Market Commission (CNMV) has opened the selection process for 36 new openings to acquire technical and administrative profiles. The call has two main areas:

- General course for CNMV technical staff, who will address the supervision of markets and entities.
- Specific to specialised areas: Data Analysts, Cybersecurity and Technological Risk Supervision, Information Systems, Financial Management and Administration.

This year's offer proves the trend in enhancing the addition of specialists in new professions related to technology, along with traditional financial profiles. The addition of those who are appointed to such positions, including those hired in the previous year, means that a quarter of the CNMV's workforce is renewed.

Applicants holding a bachelor's, architecture, engineering or graduate degree may submit their applications as technical staff. The selection process includes an initial competitive examination with four tests: multiple-choice, English, written exercise and oral exercise. No previous professional experience is required. Professional merits will be considered for candidates with prior experience.

Six of the vacant positions are reserved for people with disabilities.

Applicants must submit their application through the CNMV's virtual office, in accordance with the instructions and models established in the rules, available on the CNMV's website. The deadline for applications is 28 April.
